In "Le Royaume" of July-August 1997 [no. 120, pp. 23-24], Marie-Paule wrote:

A life of union with God divinizes us as of this life. All our actions must bear the seal of a love of God and souls, in giving, forgiving and the abandoning of self. Nothing for oneself and everything for God in complete detachment, even from that which is spiritual.

Abandonment to God's will is the key to a rapid spiritual ascent; abandonment to God's will means that we will never give up. To give and to give of oneself always, according to His will!

This abandonment to God's will makes us progress through all the phases of the spiritual life: the purgative life, the illuminative life and the unitive life, strewn with the active and passive nights of the senses, with the terrible night of the spirit through the purification of our three faculties: intelligence, will and memory.

There are other paths as well which are mentioned in the last volumes of Life of Love and which it is not appropriate to mention here because the secrets of the King must be understood according to their context. Therefore, we must accept the constant battles of the battlefield, a field of predilection for the Master because that is where He makes His conquests.

As we await the blessed day of the light without shadows, we must embrace the CROSS raised on the mountain of SACRIFICE.

That was the path that had been traced out for me and which I lived according to providential events.

Mother: Thus said the Lady.

Assembly: May she be blessed forever.
