In "Le Royaume" of November-December 2000 [no. 146, p. 8], Marie-Paule wrote:

The more a soul perceives God's action within it, the more it plunges into its littleness. On the other hand, pride closes the soul, the heart and the spirit to the divine action. To be honest, mystical ways are marvelous, for everything is so simple with God. The mystery is opening up to the contemplation of those who are simple and little.

And Marie-Paule concluded her article with these words:

It is so good to love, even when the heart aches, or better still, to love until the heart aches from having loved so much. When the world will understand that Love is a flower that one must water through the giving of self, and through forgiveness in abandonment, but more particularly through the stripping off of one's "SELF" to the point where there is nothing left but love, then we will be living in a paradise here below. And this paradise, one carries it in one's heart.

Mother: Thus said the Lady.

Assembly: May she be blessed forever.
